DETAILED ACTION

The indicated allowability of claims 7-20 is withdrawn in view of the newly discovered reference(s). Rejections based on the newly cited reference(s) follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reznik, U.S. Patent 5951839 in view of Spadaccini et al. (Spadaccini), U.S. Patent 6,315,815 and Isley, U.S. Patent 3,933,638.

The Reznik patent teaches the electrochemical conversion system for treating a fuel by reducing the oxidation-reduction potential at the cathode (see col. 6, lines 48-54 and col. 8, lines 12-22). The reference further discloses the oxidation followed by the reduction as claimed, wherein the electrodes are shaped similar and placed to contact the fuel (see col. 8, lines 12-22).

The Reznik patent, while disclosing the formation of hydrogen at the cathode does not disclose the mechanism by which the fuel redox potential is reduced, i.e., the combination of hydrogen with oxygen to form water. The Spadaccini patent is cited to show the presence of oxygen in fuel supports oxidation reactions, i.e., the higher redox potential.

Therefore, one having ordinary skill in the art would recognize that the results obtained in the Reznik patent, i.e. the reduction of the redox potential would have been accomplished by a similar mechanism as recited in the present invention.

The Reznik patent further fails to teach the removal of water from the fuel. The Isley patent is cited to teach the need to remove water from fuel before use of the fuel (see claim 2).

Consequently, the invention as a whole would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the disclosure of the Reznik patent to remove the water formed therein, because the Isley patent teaches the removal of water from fuel to obtain a purified fuel.
